GENERATIONAL- KNOWING AND ART- MAKING

Wednesday,

12 - 1 PM
Via Zoom (Register Here)

Opening Space is a Zoom-based series, co-hosted by the TTUHSC Office of Global Health and the TTU Vernacular Music Center, that increases connections, capacity building, and resilience through community building.

Join us in November as we discuss how generational knowledge, tradition sharing, and art-making and movement impact community health and wellbeing and capacity for resilience. Panelists will include Dr. Debra Flores, Professor of Health Administration, Dr. Ali Duffy, Professor of Dance, and Shantal Taylor, MD Candidate.

The event will promote conversation among individuals – students, faculty, staff, and community partners – who specialize in the arts, humanities, and STEM topics. By sharing a dialogue between and across their fields of expertise and realms of experience, we highlight the bridges and points of connection amongst us and how connections increase our wellbeing.

THIS EVENT IS FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.
